Martha and Mary

The gospels tell us several times that Martha and her sister Mary, along with their brother Lazarus, were good friends of Jesus. On one occasion, Jesus was visiting them and Martha was busy with the details of hospitality, while Mary sat at the feet of the Lord and listened to him speak. When Martha complained to Jesus that Mary was not helping with the work, Jesus responded by defending Mary, who (in his words) had “chosen the better part.”

Jesus did not tell Martha to stop working, but he did say something about the degree of priority work should have in comparison to prayer (which is how we sit at the Lord's feet). Their relative priority is implied in a statement of St. John Paul II: “A constant danger for apostolic workers is to become so much involved in their work for the Lord, as to forget the Lord of all work.” In prayer, we are mindful of the Lord of all work. We receive from him the strength and enlightenment we need in order for our work to be fruitful.

Whether we tend to be more like Martha or more like Mary, we are called to look at the proper relationship between these two tendencies in our lives. Let's continue to work for the Lord, while never forgetting the Lord of all work.

Marta y María

En varias ocasiones los evangelios nos narran que Marta y su hermana María, junto con su hermano Lázaro, eran buenos amigos de Jesús. En una ocasión, Jesús los visitó y Marta estaba ocupada con los quehaceres de la casa, mientras que María se sentaba a los pies del Señor y lo escuchaba hablar. Cuando Marta se quejó con Jesús de que María no le estaba ayudando con el trabajo, Jesús respondió defendiendo a María, quien (en sus palabras) había “elegido la mejor parte”.

Jesús no le dijo a Marta que dejara de trabajar, pero nos enseñó el grado de prioridad que el trabajo debe tener en comparación con la oración (que es como nos sentamos a los pies del Señor). Su prioridad relativa está implícita en una declaración de San Juan Pablo II: “Puede ser un peligro constante para los ministros de la iglesia involucrarse tanto en el trabajo para el Señor, y olvidar al Señor en todo trabajo”. En la oración, tenemos presente al Señor de todo trabajo. Recibimos de él la fuerza y la luz que necesitamos para que nuestro trabajo sea fructífero.

Tal vez tendemos a ser más como Marta o más como María, pero estamos llamados a buscar el término medio en nuestras vidas entre estas dos tendencias. Sigamos trabajando para el Señor, sin olvidar nunca al Señor de todo trabajo.
